This is what Friedrich Nietzsche believed and said: "I know life better than others, because so many times I was here to lose it. Only the great pain is the supreme liberator of the spirit. Only it forces us to penetrate into our last depths.". This is the case with philosophers: when I am ill, I think only of how good it is to be healthy and how quickly I forget the suffering after it has passed. It is said that when he was exiled by the British to St. Helena, Napoleon said, "When China wakes up, the world will tremble." I wouldn't think that the exile was interested, at that time, in the fate of the world, being preoccupied with writing his memoirs for posterity. However, the world is shaking with times without China awake. By the way, the French journalist Michel Richard writes: "If there were an appropriate International Criminal Court, We should prosecute China with the following charges: World Health Attack and Sanitary War Crime." .. * The historian Ioan-Aurel Pop, the president of the Romanian Academy, writes: it is absurd. Today's young people will also become irreparably old and unquestionably old.

"I agree, but that doesn't help. I wear a muzzle until it becomes mandatory and I have nowhere to go, so I went to the Express store to buy some lemons. A lady with a hat pulled up to her eyebrows and a mask up to the root of her nose, when she saw me, she hurried around me, as if she had seen Kill him. Toaca stood for 4-5 meters until I left fruit. I would have liked to say the old saying, "Why are you afraid? Don't run away," but I refrained. You also remember Ceausescu's major goal: "The formation of the new man." Recently, I read that "we need a new normal." Let's talk so we don't fall asleep! * In Romania, on September 8, 1950, the first administrative reorganization took place, then, following the amendment of the law, in 1952, the Hungarian Autonomous Region was created, with an area of 13,550 square meters and 730,000 inhabitants, the official languages being Romanian and Hungarian. The "experiment" worked for 16 years, until Ceausescu set foot on the threshold and recreated his current counties. Rhetorical question: why didn't the Szeklers revolt then and get up now? To me, Iohannis seems more "fierce" in appearance than Ceausescu. The lifeboat for Romanian culture in this time of crisis would be the Administration of the National Cultural Fund, but it is financed by the revenues of the Romanian Lottery. But our clever leaders also stopped the Lottery, which would have brought some more money to the budget from suckers like me, who are not few! * According to statistics, Romanians represent 23 percent of foreigners residing in Italy, but you can add those who are not registered, ie 1,200,000 plus. . . Why do our compatriots feel better there than in other countries? Simple, because macaroni is like polenta or vice versa: flirtatious, noisy, communicative, exuberant, family, superficial ... If in Germany Romanians only go to work and earn, in Italy many stay because they like it, being a kind of more evolved Romania from an economic point of view. For all, longing remains unaltered. The house, the car, the money in the bank should not be a goal, but a means of making your life ... bearable.
