Every skin disease is an enigma. Dermatology is a very vast field in the Medicine. The human skin measures 2.2 m². Whatever pathology happens in the human organ or system, be it respiratory, hepatic, digestive, renal or the central nervous system will get reflected on the skin. That is why it is advised to all concerned in the diagnosis and treatment of the skin diseases not to be focused only on the skin but to set a wider net to catch more pathologies inside. That only will make a diagnosis complete and proper approach for a definite treatment. A dermatologist will diagnose something clinically but he will be amazed to see something else in the histopathology. This will not only baffle him but will help him to educate himself and the dermatology interns and more interests will be created in their minds. With all these considerations in the mind this journal aptly named as Clinical Dermatology Open Access Journal is being brought forward and published.

It is a truly open access journal and indexed in famous indices and I am sure the day is not far away to get this journal recognized by PUBMED. I invite many more authors and all budding Dermatologists to share their innovative clinical findings with the world through this journal.

I feel extremely pleased and privileged to pen this foreword for this wonderful journal. Though there are many text books that teachers and interns will read, this journal will be a supplement for them to prepare for the M.D., or the Board examinations purely focusing on clinical dermatology updates and recent advances in dermatology in particular. I will not be surprised, in due course this journal, will be a most wanted one for the institutions and university libraries. Soon it will be flooded with interesting articles from Pediatric dermatology, Cosmetology and Dermatologic Oncology so also bacterial and viral diseases.

Finally, I like to thank the authors, co-authors and last but not the least the MedWin publishers for bringing out this journal on time without any flaws.

I wish this Clinical Dermatology Open Access Journal all the very best of luck and a very bright and brilliant future!
